Kerstin Hensel

Regenbein's Colours
[Regenbeins Farben]
Novella

Luchterhand
256 pages
March 2020

Kerstin Hensel was born in 1961. She worked as a nurse, studied at the German Literature Institute in Leipzig, and currently teaches at the Ernst Busch Drama School.

www.kerstin-hensel.de

A cemetery near the air corridor of an airport is the regular meeting place of three women caring for the graves of their husbands: Lore Müller-Kilian, a capricious entrepreneur's wife with a proclivity for Champagne loneliness; 80-year-old art professor Ziva Schlott; and Karline Regenbein, a modest painter working off the art world's beaten track.

One day Eduard Wettengel appears on the scene. He, too, has been recently widowed. All of a sudden, things start to liven up in the small community of mourners. The female trio starts vying for the gallery owner's favour. Splendidly funny, with bitingly delightful entanglements taking their course.

Press

"Kerstin Hensel always manages to create highly comical moments of true feeling."

A modern story of heroism: about the loneliness of being different and salvation through love

Patrick Hofmann
Nail in the Sky
[Nagel im Himmel]
Novel

Penguin
304 pages
March 2020

Patrick Hofmann, born in 1971, studied philosophy, German and history in Berlin, Leipzig, Moscow and Strasbourg and wrote his PhD thesis on the philosopher Edmund Husserl. For his highly acclaimed debut, The Last Sow, he was awarded the Robert Walser Prize in 2010. Nail in the Sky is his second novel.

Numbers are Oliver’s refuge. His mother ran away from the small town in Saxony shortly after his birth in the summer of 1989, and his father couldn’t care less about him.

When he is seventeen, Oliver receives his first acclaim ever when is awarded a distinction at the Mathematical Olympiad in Montreal. After that, everything is different – but nothing is better. Sure, the most reputable companies want him to come and work for them, and he can make his biggest wish come true: to work on the big mathematical problem, the mystery of prime numbers. Yet this task drives him to the deepest depths of his very existence. Until physicist Ina rescues him from his loneliness.

Nail in the Sky tells the story of failure and success, dark and light, longing and love. It is a bildungsroman about brilliant science, ecstatic imagination and human greatness – astute, gripping and unforgettable.
Franz Hohler was born in Biel, Switzerland, in 1943. He lives in Zurich and is considered to be one of his country's most prominent revue performers and writers. He has been awarded many prizes, including the Kassel Literature Prize for Grotesque Humour in 2002, the 2005 Art Award of the City of Zurich, the 2013 Solothurn Literature Prize, the 2014 Alice Salomon Prize and the Johann Peter Hebel Prize. Luchterhand has been publishing his books for over forty years.

Franz Hohler's writing is also travel. Not infrequently does it originate while he is out and about – at stations or airports, while walking or waiting.

Scheduled Stay is a collection of the latest short prose works by the grand master of the short form. The stories take us far away, to Sarajevo, Odessa or to the Maidan in Kiev. Yet they also take us to a waiting room in Schwäbisch Hall or to the birch tree in front of one's own house. Brilliantly casually and spot on they open a window onto reality – the reality that is unfamiliar and the reality that is one's own. They are about what can be discovered in our increasingly small world if you only take a close look.

Praise

"Franz Hohler presents stories to his readers that you could only call incredible if they hadn't been born in the midst of everyday observations."

When the journey into the future becomes a look into the past

Michael Stavarič
Strange Light
[Fremdes Licht]
Novel
Luchterhand
March 2020

She is in an unknown place and in icy, inhospitable surroundings. Only gradually does her memory return, and Elaine understands what has happened – that her grandfather used to live with the Inuit in Greenland and taught her how to survive in ice and snow; that she recently worked for a Swiss company in Winterthur and was involved there as a geneticist with the reconstruction of life; that Earth perished when hit by a comet and she seems to be the only survivor. As yet she has no idea what all this has got to do with her great-grandmother from Greenland.

The Iron Heart of Charlie Berg
[Das eiserne Herz des Charlie Berg]
Novel

March 2020

Sebastian Stuertz, born in 1974, is a media artist, music producer and podcaster, and his main job is animating graphics for films and television. He lives and works in Hamburg. The Iron Heart of Charlie Berg is his debut novel.

Charlie Berg has a weak heart and the sensitive nose of a dog. The only thing his parents taught him as a child was that a couple of artists should never have children.

It is the early 1990s, Charlie wants to move out and stop being the family jackass who keeps everything together while mother is at the theatre unsettling the world and father sitting around stoned for weeks in recording studios. The job at the lighthouse is within his grasp – and then everything gets out of hand: While out hunting with Granddad, not only is the stag shot at but Granddad as well. And what about Charlie's secret big love, Mayra, his video pen pal in Mexico? Doesn't have anything better to do than marry that crook Ramón ...

Norbert Hummelt
Sun Song
[Sonnengesang]
Poems
Luchterhand
96 pages
February 2020

Norbert Hummelt, born in 1962, freelances as a writer in Berlin. He had the honour of winning the Hölty Prize in 2018 for his poetry. Previous to that he had been awarded the Rolf-Dieter Brinkmann Prize, the Mondsee Lyrik Prize, the Lower Rhine Literature Prize, and others. He has translated T.S. Eliot's poems The Wasteland and Four Quartets and also edited the poems by W.B. Yeats. Recent Luchterhand publications were Pan's Hour and Purgatory.

"shrieking they come over the wall & dive / down deep into the court & they whisk my sight / upwards always only towards the big sun ..."

The sun and its light are at the centre of Norbert Hummelt's new poems, for no matter how artistically and imaginatively we arrange our world, without sunlight we are lost. It is the artificial light of the space station passing through the sky over Berlin. It is the power that invigorates nature; steers the sight of the observer. The ring of a bell, the call of the woodpigeon whisk us away out of our rigidity, awaken longings, cause images to appear in which light and brightness are stored.

Dreams cannot be held except in verses – they vibrate in the vivid rhythms of these poems that are as simple as songs and yet packed with mystery.

Press

“What is so wonderful about Norbert Hummelt's poems is their light and floating tone."

The story of Death Fugue: the first account of the international impact of Paul Celan

Thomas Sparr

Death Fugue – Biography of a Poem

[Todesfuge – Biographie eines Gedichts]

DVA

336 pages

With 30 b/w illustrations and facsimiles

March 2020

Thomas Sparr, born in 1956, studied literature and philosophy and then worked between 1986 and 1989 at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. From there he moved to the Literature Archive in Marbach. The years 1990 to 1998 saw him in charge of the Jüdischer Verlag, as chief editor of the Siedler Verlag and as editor-at-large for the Suhrkamp Verlag, in which latter activity he is still involved. He has made a name for himself with his work on Paul Celan.

No other poem after 1945 is as well-known as Paul Celan's Death Fugue. Written under the impact of the murder of his parents by the National Socialists, it is seen as one of the earliest literary testimonies in face of the Shoah.

Thomas Sparr has written a history of this poem which, as no other piece of post-war writing, paints a picture of an entire epoch and which even to this day still has a lasting international impact. The author starts out with the poem's genesis, covers its initially controversial reception in the 1950s and ends with writers and artists who have been inspired by it. His narrative also demonstrates that the poem, in a very special way, is an account of Celan's biography.

We'll Talk about That Later
[Darüber reden wir später]
Novel
Wunderraum
240 pages
March 2020

Cornelia Achenbach, born in 1982, studied politics and Romance languages and literature and works for the Neue Osnabrücker Zeitung. We'll Talk about That Later is her first novel.

A little life in a house with a garden. The two children have long since moved out. Margret has given up her big dream of writing books. When her husband has to go to hospital she is alone in the house – a state of affairs she almost likes. She begins to ask questions. Is Gert the right man? Should she have chosen Andreas instead, all those years ago?

To give her something else to think about, her brother gives her the diaries of their deceased mother. Suddenly she is confronted by a love that survived war and flight – and an event no one has ever spoken about. Until Ingrid, their older sister, breaks through the distance of so many years and at last begins to talk.

A novel about the fragile balance between closeness and distance in relationships with those nearest to us.

For all readers of Dörte Hansen and Daniela Krien.
Some people get sent miracles. Others are sent eight-year-old Lupi ...

Lucy Astner, born in 1982, works as a scriptwriter. She writes movie comedies for Til Schweiger, Matthias Schweighöfer and others, and is just as popular as a children’s book writer.

TV presenter Jacob Chrissen leads a life in clover – until he loses his wife and son in a helicopter crash. It verges on a miracle that he survived virtually unscathed. But Jacob sees no further sense in life and he doesn’t believe in miracles.

Eight-year-old Lupi, on the other hand, could do with a miracle. When she first meets Jacob she is convinced of one thing: This man must be God himself! Who else would survive a crash from the skies? And so Lupi is determined to show Jacob that life is beautiful – and that the world needs him.

Thea C. Grefe has always loved spending her time with travel, either while being whisked away by books to foreign worlds, or while on her many trips to North Africa or from Norway via Uganda to Syria. In the process she has learned that it is never too late to discover life anew and let one’s dreams come true. For her latest novel set in Marrakesh she did intensive research into the recent history of Morocco and occupied herself with the recipes of Oriental delicacies that she collected locally and has adapted for everyday use.

Four people who could hardly be more different from each other meet in an old hotel in Marrakesh: Claudia, a temperamental amateur chef who is mad about reading horoscopes; Karim, a Moroccan businessman with big dreams and weighed down by cares; Charlotte, a photographer with unsuspected talents lying dormant within her; and finally Alain, a brilliant chef running away from his money problems.

They all have good reason to leave the past behind. Together they decide to kiss the hotel awake from its sleeping beauty slumbers. Not only do they stumble across a long-hidden secret in the process but also realise that it is never too late for love ...

A heart-warming story about love and friendship for all fans of Best Exotic Marigold Hotel.

Four girlfriends and an unforgettable summer that changed everything

Julia Holbe
Our Happy Days
[Unsere glücklichen Tage]
Novel
Penguin
320 pages
March 2020

Julia Holbe was born in 1969 and lives in Frankfurt am Main but spends part of the year in Brittany. She spent twenty years working as an editor of international literature at the S. Fischer Verlag. Our Happy Days is her first novel.

Lenica, Marie, Fanny and Elsa – four friends spending a never-ending summer on the Atlantic coast in France. The future lies ahead of them like a promise; they are so carefree and full of the joys of their very existence that they don't notice life laying down its path forward.

When they meet again many years later they realise that their dreams and longings still join them together like some invisible power – in spite of everything that has happened since that evening when Lenica brought Sean along.

Julia Holbe's narrative is breathtakingly emotional – the tale of the really important things in life: love and friendship, coincidence and fate, guilt and betrayal – and that we only remember the past as we want it to be.

March 2020

Annika Kemmeter, born in Mainz in 1985, studied literature in Munich, Paris and Fukuoka (Japan). She has presented her texts at the Leipzig Book Fair and other literary events.

Angelina is full of secrets. At least, that is how the young art history student, Janis, sees it. The fact that she is the granddaughter of the poet Otto Maaßen, whom Janis greatly admires, makes her all the more interesting.

After his death, Otto's final cycle of poems floats down the Rhine as a series of bottle messages. Janis and Angelina together set off to find the bottles and without realising it they get to the bottom of Angelina's family secret.

A fast-paced novel about trust, belonging and forgiveness.
François Lelord, born in 1953, studied medicine and psychology in France and California. One day he closed his practice in Paris in order to travel and find answers for himself and his readers to the really big questions of life. Hector and the Search for Happiness and the following seven volumes featuring psychiatrist Hector conquered the hearts of millions of readers far beyond the borders of Germany and France. Lelord lives with his family in Paris.

Young Robin is overwhelmed when he climbs out of his space capsule. The warm sand under his feet, the gentle wind and the play of colours on the sea are so much better than any virtual reality, no matter how perfect. He is on Earth, that distant blue planet he has hitherto only known from films and hearsay.

Yet his mission is not an easy one: Will human beings be able to return to the home planet they needed to leave after a catastrophe? How should they live if happiness is to be made possible for everyone? And will Robin manage to save his big love?

The new book by the major bestselling author: an inspiring story of discovery, a thought-provoking utopia and a reflection about what we will need in the future to be happy.

For all readers of John Strelecky and Eric-Emmanuel Schmitt.

When Anna finds herself facing the ruins of her love life, all she wants to do is get away from Hamburg. So, without further ado, she grabs her beloved little dachshund, Prince Harry, and makes for the North Sea Island of Texel. Here she would like to realise her dream of her own flower shop where she can spoil customers with colourful bunches of flowers and the smell of coffee.

But the new beginning is more difficult than Anna had imagined, for the islanders are stubborn and boycott her business. And if that were not enough, she is confronted by a dark secret from her childhood she had always run away from and which won't give her any peace. Luckily, however, help comes to Anna in the form of the charming organic farmer Luuk, who makes her heart beat that little bit faster. And then she gets to know her charming old neighbour Roos – and together they hatch out a plan to save the shop.

Jette Martens, born in 1963, loves the sea, has been horse-crazy ever since her childhood and is with heart and soul a family person. She gets the best ideas for her romantic love stories while out riding on the Baltic coast or walking through the dunes. She got her inspiration for the setting of her idyllic Swan Lake Estate trilogy from a stud farm where she spends a lot of time.

Leni urgently needs to get away from it all: from her relationship and from city life in Berlin. On the spur of the moment she flees to Swan Lake estate, where there is some beautiful old furniture for sale she would like to restore. She is given a hearty welcome on the stud farm amidst the fields of rapeseed near the Baltic coast – only Nathan thinks she is a spoilt city girl.

When the opportunity unexpectedly presents itself for Leni to set up a small workshop on the magnificent estate, she can scarcely believe her luck. She ignores the fact that Nathan behaves impertinently towards her – and that every time she sees him it gives her a warm tingly feeling ...

Ada loves her parents' house at the Baltic Sea with the wonderful farm garden, but now, after her mother's death, Gragaard has to be sold.

Together with her sister Toni she clears out the house and the boat shed, and a journey into the past begins: there are her mother's evening dresses, which revive the roaring summer festivals and the happy days before the father left the family. And there are the oil portraits that the Russian painter Maxim, for whose attention the girls competed, once made of them. When they find a letter from their mother to both of them in the bureau, Ada finally takes the courage to face her desires, and the farewell turns into a new beginning.

Anne Müller lives in Berlin. After studying theatre and literature sciences she freelanced as a radio journalist before turning to screenwriting. Summer in Super 8, her first literary novel, found many enthusiastic readers. Two Weeks in June is her new novel, which takes her back to her homeland on the Baltic Sea.

Teresa Simon is the pseudonym of a well-known German writer. She loves travelling (including into the past), is interested in unusual biographies and is often inspired by atmospheric historical settings.

Cologne in the 1930s. After the death of her father, Nellie Voss has to leave commercial school and take a job with the famous perfume company 4711. She very soon realises that she has an infallible sense of smell. But more than this her mind is occupied by her hopeless love of a man she cannot have.

Cologne 2019. Nina van Geeren’s small shop selling soap and fragrances is booming. Yet she would also like to develop her own perfume, and so she sets out to look for old recipes. In the process she stumbles across the name of Nellie Voss and a diary that makes her own life look very different.

[Über dem Meer tanzt das Licht]
Novel

Goldmann Paperback
352 pages
May 2020

Meike Werkmeister lives with her husband and their son in Hamburg and freelances as a journalist for various magazines. Whenever she finds the time she goes to the seaside – especially to Norderney, where she has been holidaying with her family since she was a child.

Maria has travelled half the world, never ignored an adventure. Not even in her dreams would she have thought she would end up on the little island of Norderney. But that is where she is – and she is happy. Maria loves her little beach café. She loves her family even more, her daughters Morlen and Hannah. And Simon, Hannah’s father. Her life is packed and there is no time for problems.

Until Simon breaks out of their daily life together and goes away with Hannah. Maria has suddenly got time. And with the time come the questions. Is she still the old explorer of old? Has she turned into a different person? And if so – where does she really belong?

Meike Werkmeister’s debut novel Stars Can Only Be Seen in the Dark sold 100,000 copies.

March 2020

Rügen 1924. There it is on the promenade of Binz, white and magnificent – the impressive Grand Hotel belonging to the von Plesow family. A lot has happened here, and things have not always been easy, but Bernadette is proud of her hotel, the best in town. It was here that she brought up her children: the quiet Alexander, who one day will inherit the Grand Hotel; Josephine, the rebellious artist who is still trying to find her place in life; Constantin, always on the go, who already has his own hotel in Berlin, the Astor.

Things could hardly be better. Of course, there is the odd quarrel with her daughter, and something seems to be not quite right with the otherwise cheerful maid Marie – but all this is nothing compared to what the unannounced visit of a man could lead to who threatens Bernadette he will disclose her darkest secret ...

April 2020

Florian Busch is the pseudonym of author Stephan M. Rother. He was born in 1968 and studied history, art history and philology in Göttingen. For fifteen years he was on the stage as stand-up historian "Magister Rother". Under the name of Benjamin Monferat he published the bestselling novels World in Flames and The Tower of the World.

1866: The small Strehlow porcelain manufactory is on the threshold of a glorious future. Young countess Thyra von Hardenstein is the patriarch's only heiress. She is to take control of the company one day and realize her father's dream: make porcelain, the white gold of royal tables, affordable for ordinary people.

But then the heavily pregnant Thyra is killed in a tragic carriage accident. Against all expectations, her child survives. All hopes now rest on the shoulders of young Sophie, who could take over the inheritance when she is old enough. But the girl is weighed down by a dark secret …

The beginning of a major family saga featuring a German porcelain manufactory in the 19th century.

Petra Durst-Benning has been freelancing full time as a writer for ten years. All her novels have been Spiegel bestsellers and are available in numerous European countries. She is also a celebrated author in the US.

After her uncle Josef’s death, Mimi Reventlow has resumed her work as a photographer. But she is no longer alone for she has been joined by Anton, the son of an innkeeper. The two of them travel through the countryside and after the narrow village life are keen to at last experience the hustle and bustle of the city.

In Berlin, Anton manages to start a flourishing postcard business, while Mimi finds it increasingly difficult to find a job as a photographer. But instead of regretting bygone times, Mimi would prefer to help shape the world of tomorrow. Then she bumps into old acquaintances, such as the sheep baroness Bernadotte, who is dreaming of a great love. What neither of the two women realise is that they are still to face the biggest challenge of their lives …

Julie Hilgenberg, born in 1991, studied journalism, works as an actress and freelances for the daily Süddeutsche Zeitung. The thought that very often you can't help but like someone when you get to know them properly inspired her to write The Brittle Girl.

Berlin, 1913. Elisa has the very rare and little researched brittle bone disease, which is why she seldom leaves her protective home. Louis is a daredevil and loves risks. Initially the marriage their parents have arranged for them seems to be a punishment, especially as Elisa is in love with her doctor, Wilhelm.

But while World War One is looming on the horizon, Elisa and Louis get closer. When both Louis and Wilhelm are eventually called up, it becomes clear how strong Elisa really is – and she finds out what true love really means.

Julia Kröhn studied history. Her big passion is not only telling stories but also delving down into history. To date she has published more than thirty largely historical novels, some of them under a pseudonym. Her latest popular book, The Fashion House, which was in the Spiegel top 20 list, is now being followed by her opulent two-volume family saga set on the sparkling Italian Riviera.

Frankfurt 1922: Salome has always wanted to swim in the sea, and one day her dream comes true when her father, the owner of a travel agency, decides to extend tourism to down south and the Italian sun – to San Remo on the picturesque Riviera. In order to break into the market he goes into cooperation with hotel owner Renzo Barbera.

Before long, the two families have close ties on a level that is more than merely professional, for Salome makes friends with Renzo’s daughter, Ornella. But soon the first signs of fascism start looming over this little paradise and make further travel difficult. Events come thick and fast when Ornella falls in love with a French businessman’s son with whom Salome also has a closer relationship ...

Alex Beer, born in Bregenz, studied archaeology and lives in Vienna. Both The Second Rider, and The Dark Courier, vols. 1 and 3 of her series featuring police agent August Emmerich, were awarded the Leo Perutz Prize. The Red Woman, vol. 2 of the series, was nominated for the Friedrich Glauser Prize 2019. After enthusiastic reviews, the fourth novel in the series, The Black Band, is eagerly awaited by her fans.

Vienna, July 1921. The city is groaning under a heatwave, water is being rationed, and the asphalt is melting. Detective inspector August Emmerich, however, is bothered by a very different problem: because he has yet again been misbehaving he has been taken off the case of two murdered striptease artists and shut away in an elite cadet school. Here, along with some other black sheep from the police service, he is to learn better manners.

But then a colleague mysteriously dies at the school and Emmerich has again to break all the rules to find the murderer – for he finds himself facing a bloody intrigue taking him to the highest circles in the world of politics …

Praise
“The stories Alex Beer tells also relate to the present time, but the way she tells them brings the distant past to life.”

December 2019

Melanie Raabe was born in 1981. After her studies she worked as a journalist during the day and secretly wrote books at night. The Trap was published in 2015, followed by The Truth in 2016. Melanie Raabe's novels are published in over 20 countries. The Trap was one of the most fiercely contested books of recent years.

When Nina gets the news that Tim, her best friend since childhood days, has suddenly died, the world collapses around her. It's made all the worse when she finds out that shortly before his death he had desperately been trying to get hold of her.

And she is not the only one he had contacted. Tim not only left her one last enigmatic message but also an urgent request – to find his sister who has disappeared in the well-nigh endless woods surrounding the village that they had all grown up in. But does Nina really want to do this? Does she really want to go back to the village and the woods she had never wanted to set foot in again – ever?

Press

"Right from the start there is a distinct atmosphere in the novel – eerie and mysterious. Plus cliffhangers that dramatically increase the suspense."

Bremen Zwei

"Anyone who reads The Woods will love and hate them at the same time."

Cosmopolitan

"Without a doubt, Melanie Raabe belongs to the best German-speaking authors of psychological thrillers."
