Ursi Breidenbach loves travelling and adores soaking in the atmosphere of places she visits – and this, of course, also includes the local food. When she happens to be at home she writes not only entertaining non-fiction books and short stories but above all wonderful love stories.

Dolce vita and amore – why not? 40-year-old Nelli spontaneously travels to Italy for a short romantic holiday with her boyfriend Luca. She immediately falls in love with the little sun-kissed village with the aroma of the most delicious tomato sauce that Nelli has ever eaten wafting through its streets. Full of curiosity she strolls over the surrounding fields in which the juicy tomatoes are maturing in the sun under the azure sky. But when she meets the attractive Roberto, who lets her into the secrets of harvesting tomatoes, Nelli's emotions start doing somersaults ...
