Richard David Precht, born in 1964, is a philosopher, journalist, and author, and one of the most distinctive intellectuals in German-speaking countries. He is an honorary professor of philosophy at the Leuphana University in Lüneburg and at the Hanns Eisler Academy of Music in Berlin. His books Who Am I and If So How Many?, Love: A Disorderly Emotion and The Art of Not Being an Egoist are international bestsellers and have been translated into 40 languages. Since 2012 he has been the moderator of the philosophy program Precht on the ZDF television network.

The 19th century revolutionised philosophy. While the bourgeoisie is emerging from industrialisation, the philosophers are losing ground. Is it at all possible to erect a closed system in the world? In a world without God and without a natural order?

It is the sciences in particular that are challenging philosophy and claiming the prerogative of the interpretation of truth and meaning. Thinkers such as Auguste Comte, John Stuart Mill, Herbert Spencer, Ernst Mach and Charles Sanders Peirce want to put philosophy methodically on the same level as physics and biology. Yet that is precisely what is causing protest. For their adversaries – people like Arthur Schopenhauer, Sören Kierkegaard and Friedrich Nietzsche – philosophy is not a science, but rather an attitude to life.

In this third volume of Precht's eminent and much-praised history of philosophy, the bestselling author explains and analyses the main topics and philosophers of the 19th century.
