

A sinister story between present and past, dream and reality

Hendrik Berg
Dike Murderer
[Deichmörder]
Crime novel

Goldmann Taschenbuch
352 pages
Format 11,8 x 18,7 cm
March 2014

Hendrik Berg, born in 1964, studied history in Hamburg and Madrid and worked as a journalist and advertising copywriter. He has been earning his living since 1996 with writing screenplays.

www.hendrik-berg.de

Eva is a young woman being stalked by an unscrupulous sex maniac, and to get away from him she and her husband secretly flee from Berlin and make for North Frisia. She hopes that here, in a small but delightful house right on the edge of the North Frisian marshes, she will be able to forget the memories of the threats from the ruthless Marco Stein. The man was positively obsessed with her, but the police were unable to find any evidence against him.

To begin with, the young couple seem to have found some peace in the idyllic landscape of North Frisia. Soon, however, Eva again feels she is being pursued and threatened – and this time not only by her own past...

For readers of Johan Theorin.