Hendrik Esch, born in 1975, works as a lawyer representing victims and defence lawyer, but also gets bogged down with rear-end collisions, migrant renters and wire fences. No human abyss is unknown to him, but he nevertheless makes sure that hope dies last. Hunting Instinct is his first novel and the beginning of a series featuring lawyer Paul Colossa.

Sir Evelyn Rutland has a reputation for being an eccentric genius as a conductor. And the Ida Rubinstein College he runs is one of the most distinguished boys' choir boarding schools in the world. What no one knows is that the boys are being doped with Ritalin to improve their performance.

When of all people the son of the maestro gets an overdose and falls into a coma, there threatens to be a huge scandal. For a princely fee lawyer Paul Colossa now has the task of whitewashing the school's reputation. The amount should have made him suspicious, however, for he is to pull the chestnuts out of the fire and himself be sacrificed ...
