

Two women so very different from each other go on a culinary road trip through France and find love

Brigitte Guggisberg
France, Here We Come!
[Frankreich, wir kommen!]
Novel

Diana Taschenbuch
368 pages
1 b/w illustrations
Format 11,8 x 18,7 cm
March 2019

Brigitte Guggisberg grew up in Switzerland and the USA, studied economics and media sciences in Basel and had a longish study stay in Aix-en-Provence. She was a consultant for the Swiss parliament and worked as a journalist, dancing critic and in top management in the world of finance. She has now returned to Basel University.

Betty, a chef in a small village in southern Germany, wants to show off her skills on the occasion of an exclusive wedding menu. But when one of the guests is allergic to the mussels and vomits all over the wedding cake, of all places, one thing is obvious: if Betty is to live her dream she is going to have to get away. Head over heels, she joins up with university dropout Iva and together they set off in a rattletrap of a food truck for the south of France. They are both determined to win the Great Street Food Competition in Monaco. Betty immerses herself in the secrets of French cuisine and creates one delicacy after another. And then suddenly, on her journey south, she unexpectedly also finds love ...