Miriam Covi was born in 1979. Her job as an administrative assistant took her to New York, Berlin and Rome, where both her daughters were born. She has been living with her family in Bangkok since 2017. The author's second home is Nova Scotia, where she spent many summers as a child and teenager and where she regularly tries to escape from the hustle and bustle of city life – and write.

When Lotte Seliger sets off on a trip to New York with her mother and two sisters, she does not realise what is in store for her: the plane has to make an emergency landing on the return flight and the four Seliger women are stuck on the East coast of Canada. Lotte now does not even know whether she will get back to Germany in time for her wedding. But that is not all: the airport hotel is booked out and a grumpy fellow by the name of Connor offers to help Lotte and her family.

Lotte falls in love with the picturesque Atlantic coast and the "Mapletree Bed & Breakfast" that puts them up. Thanks to blueberry muffins, walks along the beach and clam chowder their sojourn in Canada could be unexpectedly wonderful if it weren't for the fact that her family keeps her on the go the whole time – not to mention Connor with his gruffness and outrageously blue eyes. Why is he so unfriendly to her? When Lotte finds herself in mortal danger one stormy afternoon, it is he of all people who is at hand ...

Warm-hearted and humorous – for readers of Emma Sternberg and Debbie Johnson.
