Katharina Jensen, born in 1984, spent her childhood and teenage years on the Baltic coast before moving to Berlin to work and study psychology. She still goes to the Baltic coast several times every year, especially to the island of Rügen.

Linda loves her fiancé Markus, her home island of Rügen, the sea and the little guesthouse "North Wind" she enthusiastically runs. Everything could actually be perfect, and yet Linda feels that there is something missing. When writer Paul, who used to spend his holidays in the guesthouse with his wife, suddenly appears alone, he is completely changed. Since the loss of his wife, Paul is a broken man. Linda's helper syndrome is awakened.

The fact that she falls in love with the deeply saddened Paul is not part of the plan but it nevertheless happens, and it completely unhinges not only her world ...
