Ulrike Sosnitzka was born in Darmstadt in 1965. The former librarian lives near Würzburg with her family, and loves her garden – even if the flowers don't always grow the way she thinks they should. The Tailor of Happiness is her fifth novel for Heyne. www.ulrike-sosnitzka.de

Wedding photographer Nina needs a new apartment and a new man. In that order. Now that she is again without a partner, she has been forced to live with her parents, and she can't stand it any longer.

One day, in a sunny clearing in the woods, she comes across school social worker Felix, who loves embracing trees. She falls head over heels in love with him and he with her. Everything is perfect. Not even the huge scar on her abdomen bothers him. But then they both discover the terrible secret that ties them together.
