Nele Blohm, born in 1984, has a degree in cultural studies, and worked for an online printer for several years before becoming a parent, and finally finding the time to write. She is now a full-time author. She loves the sea, and love stories with a happy ending that take us to beautiful places.

At one stroke, Marie loses both her beloved flower shop in the Glockenbach neighbourhood of Munich and her fiancé, who's decided to go off and find himself in South-East Asia. Still in shock, she escapes to her home island of Hiddensee and her grandmother's hotel.

In this picturesque thatched building, she encounters not only an old family secret, but also her first love, Ole, now a jeweller who specialises in amber. Ten years ago she ran away from him – for good reason, even though it broke her heart. Now fate has brought them together again. Has Marie's luck finally turned?
