

You'll never stop nodding your head and laughing with this book

Katja Berlin, Peter Grünlich
What We Do When the Doorbell Rings

[Was wir tun, wenn es an der Haustür klingelt]

The world in mainly amusing diagrams – The latest from graphitti-blog.de

Heyne Taschenbuch
208 pages
Format 18,5 x 14,5
September 2013

Katja Berlin, born in Berlin in 1980, has a PhD in statistics. At present she is doing research into the banality of everyday life, which she has been investigating for several years in a pioneering experiment, with herself as the guinea pig.

What do we do with bios that won't write any more? When do we feel the urge for sex? What is the statistical composition of a shopping tour at Ikea? And that of our wardrobes?

The graphitti-blog.de website presents amusing diagrams that illustrate daily life and, more particularly, felt knowledge. After the bestselling hit What We Do When the Lift Doesn't Come, this is a new collection of amusing, surprising and creative diagrams.

Also available:

Was wir tun, wenn der Aufzug nicht kommt [What We Do When the Lift Doesn't Come], 2011