Children are given to us so that we may learn from them Pedagogical expertise for modern times: child psychology and brain research show the way

A central theme within the pedagogical programme

There are many guides which describe how children can be encouraged to learn as much as possible from their parents, educators or teachers. But is it not crucial in a relationship that both parties learn from one another and evolve together?
Psychologist Jirina Prekop and brain researcher Gerald Hüther have looked into what we as adults can learn from our children. Their search has resulted in this book for discovering those especially valuable treasures which all children hold within – a book which encourages parents, educators and teachers to view children from a new perspective. Whoever takes on the challenge will not only learn a great deal about the children but will also rediscover many things which are lost in the process of becoming an adult.
