

Dr. med. Marina
Marcovich, Theresia Maria
de Jong

Premature Babies – Too Small to Survive?

[Frühgeborene - zu klein zum
Leben?]

Security and love from the very beginning. The Marcovich-method

Kösel Sach-/Fachbuch
256 pages
Format 13,5 x 21,5 cm
February 2008

Dr. Marcovich and her trailblazing concept of gentle neonatal intensive care

Premature infants need their parents' care and attention right from the start, even whilst they are still in intensive care: plenty of close physical contact, stroking and encouragement will soothe and provide a sense of emotional security, which helps to stabilise and fortify the baby to such an extent that in many cases surgical intervention and medication can be radically reduced.

The more humane approach to the care of "prems" and the close contact between staff and parents has become standard procedure almost everywhere in the world.

The way to a baby's heart is through its skin
Essential reading for parents of premature babies