Stephanie Schneider was born in 1972 and even as a child wanted to write books. Initially, however, she was too busy building dens, setting up secret clubs and believing in water sprites. It wasn't until she had studied art and spent a few years as a teacher that she remembered the dream job of her childhood, and ever since she goes to her favourite café every morning and writes stories for children and adults.

Jonna and Mascha become famous! That nice newspaper editor Erlemann wants to publish an interview of the girls from the houseboat colony. And what's even better is that Erlemann's cute little doggy Holliwutt is to come and live on the Kunterboot! But living with a dog is really complicated – especially as Holliwutt turns out to have a few smelly "characteristics". Neither is it too easy to be famous. After all, as Jonna wonders, what can you possibly say in such an interview without sounding too embarrassing for words? Luckily the houseboat kids together find a solution for both problems. All's well that ends well!
