Benjamin Idriz, born in Skopje/Macedonia in 1972, is an imam in the Islamic Community of Penzberg and President of the "Munich Forum for Islam".

For many people, hostility towards women and Islam go hand in hand. There is nothing to be glossed over about it and a lot to be changed. This book shows how very possible such a process is, even without resorting to the know-it-all superiority of non-Moslems.

Here an imam explains what he teaches men and women in his community about the relationship between the sexes. His source is the Koran and his aim an Islam that is again aware of its liberating origins. An enlightening book for everyone for whom debate – and not denunciation – is important.
