Heinrich Bedford-Strohm, born in 1960, has been Regional Bishop of the Lutheran Church of Bavaria since 2011. He is a sought-after counsellor in socio-ethical issues. Bedford-Strohm is married to the psychotherapist Deborah Bedford-Strohm and is the father of three sons.

500 years – and what then? What will become of a Church that is shrinking in a society that is becoming less conscious of its Christian roots?

Heinrich Bedford-Strohm addresses the question of the reality of Christianity in a pluralistic society in the context of the Church's biblical visions. It is in the motifs of the beginning that he finds the most important impulse to determine the place of the Church today: love.
