Charlotte Link is the most successful German author of the present day. Her psychological suspense novels have been translated into numerous languages and are international bestsellers. In Germany alone, over 30 million books by Charlotte Link have been sold to date. Charlotte Link lives with her family near Frankfurt.

In the peaceful North English seaside resort of Scarborough, a student is found viciously beaten to death. For months, investigations get nowhere. Then there is another, very similar, crime. Nevertheless, it is scarcely possible to establish a link between the two cases. Policewoman Valerie Almond clings to what is all too obvious – the row within the family of the second victim. And yet, for a long time, she cannot see the poison that is affecting this family and the source of which she ought to be pursuing far back into the past – right back to that dreadful discovery thirty years ago and even back to the years of World War II, when a child mysteriously disappeared. It almost takes Valerie Almond too long to recognize that a sick malefactor still has not quenched his thirst for revenge.
