Ivy Andrews alias Viola Plötz, born in 1979, started freelancing as a wedding photographer and designer after studying communication design. In 2014 she finally decided to make her dream of a book of her own come true – a decision that led to several successful self-published novels and now the Blanvalet L.O.V.E. series.

For as long as Ella can remember, her life has revolved around French Chic, her family's fashion business. While her brother Henri will take over management of the business one day, Ella will be in charge of the firm's design department – that's just the way it's going to be. But a semester spent in Plymouth is enough to make Ella realise that she isn't interested in fashion at all. She'd much rather roam the untamed Cornish landscape with her camera, or barricade herself in a darkroom. But then Callum comes into the picture – a tattooed bad boy who makes her heart beat faster, and who encourages her to follow her dreams. But he's not at all the kind of man her parents want her to marry...

All volumes can also be read separately.
